Primatologist Davis (Dwayne Johnson) shares an unshakable bond with George, the extraordinarily intelligent silverback gorilla who has been in his care since he was young. When a greed-fueled corporation's genetic experiment goes awry, George and other animals across the country are mutated into aggressive supercreatures who destroy everything in their path. In this adrenaline-filled ride, Davis tries to find an antidote, not only to halt a global catastrophe but also to save the fearsome creature who was once his friend. When three different animals become infected with a dangerous pathogen, a primatologist and a geneticist team up to stop them from destroying Chicago. Overall I liked the movie. Dwayne was great as always, effects and action was also good. Although it bothered me a bit how Jeffrey Dean Morgan seemed to be stuck in his "Walking Dead" character. Ending was pretty bad, they should have left George dead but apparently that "happy american ending" just had to be there. I mean, George killed dozens of people when he was under influence of that growth goo and in the end everything is supposed to be OK when he's back to normal? Just stupid and unbelievable. What you see is what you get, plus a little bit more. Probably one of the best video game to movie adaptations I've seen. I really enjoyed the added depth to the story and the bond between Dwayne Johnson's character and George. Plus there are good number of little nods to the game. Keep an eye out for those!

Worth seeing in theaters? Probably not. But totally check it out when it hits Redbox. Per usual, Johnson is the key cog of a movie built for his physical presence, but it's the relationship between Davis and George that fuels the plot, even when everything around them gets convoluted and haphazard. a5c7b9f00b
